When We Shift the Perspective Fulcrum ... Everything Changes!

David Martin

When we shift the perspective fulcrum — moving from a collapsed, 2-dimensional view in reality to a fully triadic one that honors source, substance, and contextual field simultaneously — everything changes. Old “impossible” anomalies become readable signatures of coherence. Depleted wells begin producing again. Solid rock yields tar beyond theoretical limits. Plasma systems reveal hidden organizing principles instead of contamination.

This 27-dimensional foundation doesn't add complexity; it removes the blind spots that have kept extraordinary technologies hidden in plain sight. Moving the fulcrum opens practical new pathways in field propulsion, energy harvesting, material synthesis, and healing technologies — not as theory, but as the natural result of seeing the world as it actually interacts with itself.

The field was always there. Are we willing to stand in a new place long enough to see it?

The Lynchpin

... the Harmonic Model
for new Understanding of the universe!!!

Terrence Howard

What is the one underlying principle that all things must abide by in order to exist or be measurable within our reality? The Lynchpin marks that space....— a realization of unified field understanding. It plays a vital and fundamental role in the manifestation of our Universe. Join us as we explore the limitless nature of this most sacred geometry, and together, let's meet the future halfway.

For over a century, scientific models of the Universe have relied upon Euclidean and Cartesian frameworks combined with particle-based interpretations of matter and force. Yet persistent anomalies — from quantum entanglement and dark matter discrepancies to the limitations of energy extraction — suggest our foundational understanding may be incomplete. Terrence proposes a paradigm shift: a geometry of waves rather than points. A geometry that acknowledges curvature, symmetry, harmonic resonance, and the interconnected structure underlying reality...

The Mercury Red Thread

Ancient Technology and Fusion

Karen Elkins
Dr. Paul Finman
William Armand Sosa

From antiquity to modern times, this presentation traces mercury across ancient civilizations, revealing a deeper understanding of energy, physics, and advanced technology than conventional history has acknowledged. From the mercury-laden chambers of Teotihuacan to Chinese imperial tombs, from electrochemical artifacts to the enigmatic Dendera reliefs in Egypt, a pattern begins to emerge—one that echoes descriptions of mercury-based technologies found in ancient texts describing Vimanas. This thread extends forward into modern times through the experiments of Nikola Tesla with mercury, plasma, resonance, and wireless power — most notably his ability to illuminate fluorescent tubes without any direct electrical connection.

The Dendera Light, found within the Temple of Hathor, is among the most controversial images in ancient Egypt. William's research explores whether these famous reliefs preserve knowledge of a real plasma-based technology. Through the construction and successful operation of working replicas, he investigates the electrical nature, physical design, and possible applications of these ancient devices, bringing together reconstruction, observation, and alternative theories surrounding lost technologies and our cosmos.

This presentation offers unique insights by bridging ancient symbolism with modern scientific principles, suggesting that energy may not simply be created, but tuned, resonated with, and transferred through fields and conductive mediums such as mercury. What if these fragments—ancient accounts, artifacts, symbolic imagery, and Tesla's work—are part of a continuous technological lineage? One humanity is only now beginning to recognize. This exploration opens the gateway to a new perspective on the ancient world!
